THE CORE TOUCHPOINT

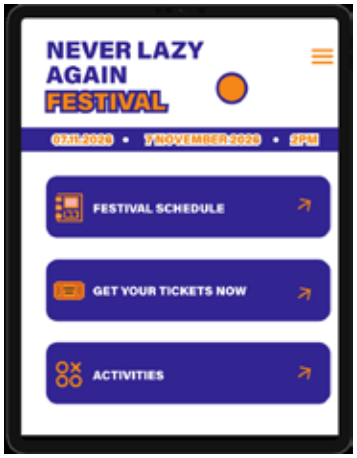

An Instagram post prototype featuring my festival's poster. It introduces the festival to the user, draws them to the official website, and allows them to purchase tickets there.

THE STEP BY STEP FLOW

The user sees the Instagram post about the festival, with a button that links to the festival website

The user lands on the festival's homepage, which displays the activities, ticket sales, and the festival schedule. We assume the user will buy tickets first

Here is the user's shopping cart, containing the tickets they are going to order.

There you can see the activity list, so the user knows what there is to do at the festival.

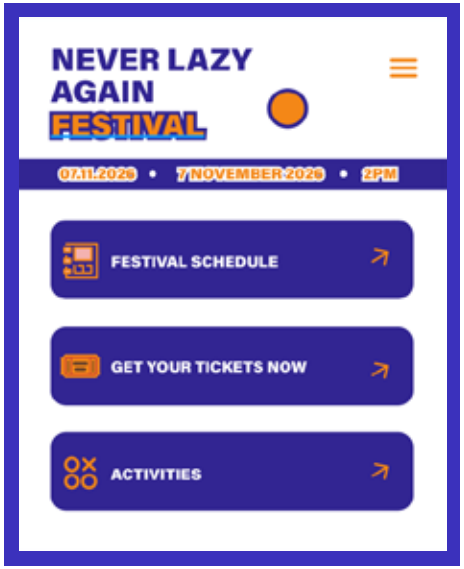

WHAT CHANGED

BEFORE

Based on feedback regarding a lack of uniformity, I applied the color palette more consistently across the design

AFTER

Based on the feedback, the visual design was refined to ensure greater uniformity and a cohesive use of accent colors

THE CAMPAGNE
& INTRO

Start moving , keep going....

LAUNCH

TEASER

NON-CONVENTIONAL

This unconventional concept elevates the festival experience by suspending a massive main stage in the air, creating a futuristic, spatial dynamic

THE TEST

Figma user test

What did I test?

I had the user tester try out my festival website to make the usability better.

Which tasks did the user tester have to do and who was that?

The user tester was a friend; she had the task of navigating the website as if she was going to buy a ticket.
